

Scripture Reading: Psalm 111

When you have God, you have everything! —Anon.

You have no doubt seen television commercials which feature “real people, not actors.” Some companies have no trouble finding real people to endorse their products. Dove soap, Chevrolet and eHarmony find non-actors to extol, praise and endorse commercial products or concepts.

Why? Well, you know. If we’re convinced that the person in love with this herbal, eco-friendly shampoo is a real, common, average person like us, we’ll buy it and try it. We’ll put down cash for stuff because a person of our own tribe and status loves this shampoo — not some phony Hollywood actor/celebrity.

This is why most people, according to a recent survey, prefer real people, not actors, in commercials. It’s just more authentic.

Like the writer of today’s psalm: he’s a real person, like us. Not a professional troubadour, hired to sing praise to Yahweh. This guy’s the real deal.

And the song! This psalm is a work of art! It has 22 phrases (excluding verse 1a), each beginning with a successive letter of the Hebrew alphabet. In just 175 words, the singer summarizes the whole history of God’s deliverance of ancient Israel as his poetic homage to the Lord! Psalm 111 is not a voice-over by a paid performer. There’s nothing fake about this person. He’s real. He’s impressed. And he wants to tell us, sell us and ask us to buy and try.

This, then, is what the ancient lyricist has to say. It’s his testimony. He starts with “Praise the LORD” and he ends with “His praise endures forever.”

What is our testimony? We are called to be real people, not actors, in our relationships with others. People are looking for real people, authentic people; people who are not showing off, not putting on airs of superiority or self-righteous hypocrisy.

But, of course, we need something positive to say. Do we have anything to say? Are we real people, not actors, in our worship of God?

—Timothy Merrill

Prayer: Lord, I echo what Psalm 111 says about you. I, too, praise you for your loving-kindness to me. Amen.
